Procurement Documents

Why do we need documents?

- Procurement Management is a systematic approach
- It's therefore, a structured, documented process

Documents ensure;

- Transparency
- Accountability
- Legal protection
- Vendor comparability
- Proper decision making

Procurement documents are formal written records used throughout the procurement lifecycle to communicate requirements, invite suppliers, evaluate offers, and formalize agreements.

Documents Required at Each Stage

Stage	Documents
Planning	Procurement Plan, Budget Plan
Solicitation	RFI, RFQ, RFP, ITT
Evaluation	Bid Evaluation Reports
Award	Contract Agreement
Management	Purchase Orders, Invoices

Request for Proposal (RFP)

- Used for complex projects
- The company (buyer) typically provides a Statement of Work (SOW) or a detailed scope description within the Request for Proposal (RFP).
- It acts as the project's roadmap, defining necessary tasks, deliverables, and performance standards, enabling vendors to submit accurate proposals, define deliverables, and minimize risk.
- Vendors should propose the required;
 - Solutions
 - Methodology
 - Cost

Invitation to Tender (ITT)

- Formal and legal bidding process
- Common in government procurement where strict rules & deadlines apply

Purchase Order (PO)

- Official document to authorize the purchase
- Includes good/ work
 - Quantity
 - Price
 - Delivery details

Invoice

Issued by supplier to request payment

Best Practices

- Consistent Naming- Use clear, consistent naming conventions in filenames (e.g., "Report_v1.0_Final")
- Centralized Storage- Store files in a shared, secure location, such as SharePoint or a document management system, rather than local drives.
- Revision History Table- Include a table at the start of documents listing version number, date, author, and description of changes.
- Automation- Utilize software tools to handle version numbering and history automatically, reducing manual error.
- Finalizing- Make documents "read-only" once they are approved to prevent accidental changes.
